Does Stellantis track users by using cookies or other online technologies to collect information?

When you browse or visit one of our Sites, we may store certain information on your computer. This information may be in the form of a small text file called a “cookie” and can help us to tailor our Sites to your individual preferences and save you time if you visit the Site again. Cookies are text files containing small amounts of information which are downloaded to your device when you visit a website. Cookies are useful in a number of ways, including allowing a website that you use to recognize your device, keep track of pages visited and even remember your preferences. Cookies can expire at the end of a browser session (these are called “session” cookies) or they can be stored longer (these are called “persistent” cookies). You can disable cookies by making the appropriate selection from your browser options to inform you when cookies are set or to prevent cookies from being set. However, if you choose to disable or delete cookies, you may limit the functionality we can provide when you visit our site. We may use online tracking technologies, such as cookies, to gather anonymous, aggregate information about your visit to our Sites. This information allows us to measure site activity and to create ideas for improving our Sites and may include the time and length of your visit, the pages you look at on our Sites, the website you visited just before coming to ours and your internet service provider. If we provide you with a link from a Stellantis Site to another site, we may track the fact that you clicked the link. This will help us understand which links are helpful to you when you visit our Site and will help us provide you with links that may be of interest to you, when you visit our Site again.

We use Microsoft Clarity, a user behavior analytics tool provided by Microsoft, to analyze how visitors use and interact with our website. Microsoft Clarity collects behavioral data, such as clicks, scrolls, mouse movements, and other interaction events, to help us better understand user engagement and improve the overall user experience.

How Microsoft Clarity Works

Microsoft Clarity uses first-party cookies and other tracking technologies to capture data about your behavior on our website. This data may include, but is not limited to, your interactions with content, the duration of your visits, pages viewed, and navigation patterns. Clarity also enables us to generate heatmaps and session replays:

- Heatmaps: Microsoft Clarity generates heatmaps that visually represent user interactions on our website. These heatmaps show which areas of the page receive the most attention, based on user clicks, scrolls, and mouse movements. This data helps us identify which content and areas of our site are most engaging to users and which sections may need improvement or optimization.
- Session Replays: Clarity also records session replays, which are recordings of individual user interactions with our website. This allows us to review user behavior, understand how visitors navigate the site, and identify any issues they may encounter during their sessions. These replays are used to help us improve website design, enhance user flow, troubleshoot issues, and ensure a smoother overall experience for visitors.

Purpose of Data Collection

We use the data captured through Microsoft Clarity for the following purposes:

- Website Optimization: To better understand how visitors interact with our site and to identify areas for improvement in layout, design, and functionality. This helps us enhance your experience by providing relevant and easy-to-navigate content.
- Site Performance and Usability: To ensure the website is user-friendly and to analyze the effectiveness of specific design changes or content updates.
- Security and Fraud Prevention: To detect and prevent any fraudulent or suspicious activities on our website.

Data Collection and Privacy

Microsoft Clarity collects and processes data using cookies and other tracking technologies. The information gathered is generally anonymous and aggregated, but it may include personal data in certain circumstances, such as when it is linked with your account on our website. You can learn more about the data Microsoft collects and how it is used by visiting the Microsoft Privacy Statement.

Opting Out of Microsoft Clarity

You have the option to opt-out of Microsoft Clarity's data collection. For more information on how to disable or manage cookies in your browser, or to opt-out of data collection by Microsoft Clarity, please visit Microsoft's Privacy Statement.

We use Google Analytics, a popular web analytics service provided by Google, Inc. Google Analytics generates statistical and other information about use of our Sites by means of cookies, which are stored on visitors' computers. It counts the number of visitors and tells us things about their behavior overall – such as the typical length of stay on the Site or the average number of pages a user views. The information generated relating to our Sites is used to create reports about the use of the Sites. Google will store this information. We also use reCAPTCHA, a service from Google, to protect our site from spam and abuse. This service may collect personal data to help distinguish between human users and bots. Google's privacy policy is available at: <http://www.google.com/policies/privacy/>. You can learn more about how to opt out of the collection and processing of such information by Google by visiting this website: <https://tools.google.com/dlpage/gaoptout>.
